

Two Words

by Lauren Cole © September 2001

Speak you not of this land's freedom
If the chains of war yet bind us with their weight
This isn't right and wrong, nor good and evil
But simply love and hate
To both sides who stand affronted
Consider carefully your blame
Though one man's tyrant be another's king
The innocent are always the same